Q2.1. Rights & Privacy

- All material can be made available for unrestricted access and reuse.
- All or most material can be made available for unrestricted access, including subject to a fair use claim library can support.
- Material contains a mix of restricted and unrestricted material; Library may support a fair use claim. Changing circumstances (expiring term, e.g.) may render some currently restricted materials accessible in the near future (<5 years).
- Most material restricted; Library unable to support fair use claim at this time. Changing circumstances (expiring term, e.g.) may render some currently restricted materials accessible in the distant future (5 years+).
- All material restricted with no viable claim, now or in the foreseeable future.

Q2.2. Further comments?

- Yes
- No

Q2.3. Comments

Most material is subject to an agreement via Omeka that gives us broad rights, but some is less clear.

Q3.1. Opportunity for Innovation

- Transformative to Library services or University mission and is aligned with Library strategic plan.
- Develops ongoing innovations to Library services or University mission and is aligned with Library strategic plan.
- Potential for innovation aligned with Library strategic plan dependent upon design decisions.

- Potential for innovation dependent upon design decisions; alignment with Library strategic plan unclear.
- No innovation identified or innovation is not in alignment with Library strategic plan.

Q3.3. Comments

The presentation of the born-digital will require some innovation, since we don't usually collect this type of material (tweets, websites for Archiveit).

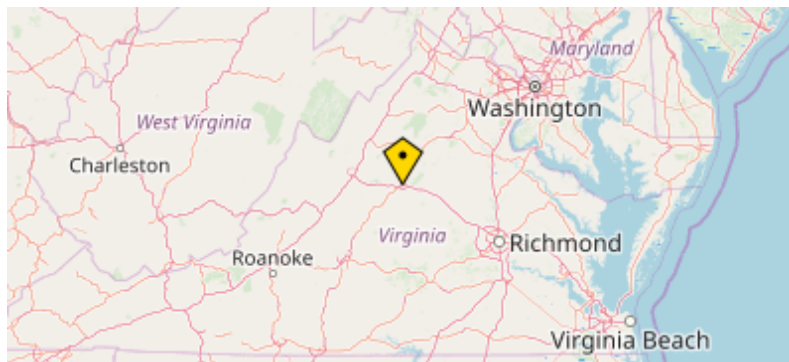

Q4.1. General Comments (use this free-text field to add any considerations not covered elsewhere):

We need to work to ensure that the curator responsible for a collection participates in the proposal process in future. For instance, the submitter said the collection was probably closed to researchers. It's not. It would have been useful to inform the committee that after I spent a good deal of time selecting websites for archiving, it took us so long to archive those websites that many of them were gone by the time we got to them. We are not set up well yet for crisis collecting and we need a solid infrastructure for this type of work.

Q3.4. Comments

To digitize all of the materials we have for this collection as of Jan. 31, 2018, we estimate that it will take approximately 35 hours of student work time to complete this digitization. We would likely need to spread this out over 1 to 3 months, depending upon our student staffing levels at the time we got started. Any additions to the collection would extend the time required and the timeline.

Number of preservation related innovations in workflows and policies here--how to get items out of Omeka (community selected items); how to deal with large massive transfers of community content that were too large for Omeka transfer and back out to the people. Right now, the Omeka site and some of the websites are the only digital access to this collection. We continually have folks trying to access the rest of the materials. Figuring out these workflows will help with future community submitted content opportunities.

There may be some maintenance, particularly if we decide to keep the omeka instance....tbd

Q4.1. Preservation

- Preservation planning and maintenance is minimal for this project. (e.g. project is small or contains well known/ubiquitous formats/content that has known processing, description, rights/privacy and preservation pathways and known partners. Example: ETDs into Libra that are then distributed AP Trust)
- Preservation planning and maintenance is moderate for this project. (e.g. project/collection may have some unique/unknown formats that are necessary to preserve, may be very large in nature, may require some development or systems integration to ensure access, description, processing are possible, etc.)
- Preservation planning and maintenance is significant for this project. (e.g. entails unique / delicate condition/carriers or large complex digital objects (think possible requirements for software dependencies with digital materials along with complex access requirements like emulation, huge volume of digital interspersed with analog materials, encrypted or highly sensitive information, unique legacy digital carriers/formats, delicate physical or need for outsourcing unique A/V materials) Could also include difficult aspects that intertwine with legal/access such as encryption or personal information)
